Wisconsin AIHA November Program Announcement

Topic: Decoding the Data: Moving Beyond IH Sampling

Industrial hygienists are good at collecting industrial hygiene samples and are likely experienced in various aspects of environmental health and safety. However, how good are we looking at our data more critically? Are we making the correct exposure assessments? At this dinner meeting you’ll learn how to look more deeply at your industrial hygiene data and how to make better exposure assessments. Using the AIHA Exposure Assessment guidelines, we’ll work through a real exposure assessment performed at a facility manufacturing lead acid battery components. Don’t be afraid of statistics, we have software for stats! You have expertise in sampling and collecting data, so let’s see how to examine your data and make better exposure judgments.

Also if you bring a guest Mike will enter your name to get a copy of the AIHA book A Strategy for Assessing and Managing Occupational Exposures, 4th Ed.
